

Triton Knoll Offshore Wind Farm

Archaeology and education drop-in events

Triton Knoll and J Murphy & Sons would like to invite you to learn about the archaeological work being carried out on the Triton Knoll offshore wind farm project, and to see some of the discovered artefacts with your own eyes, including a Bronze Age axe head, Roman pottery, ancient farming tools and more.

Please join us at our public drop-in events to find out what lies beneath the Lincolnshire soil and understand how communities in Lincolnshire used to live. You're welcome to drop-in any time at either of our public events.

Miracles to Medicine
Monday 8th July

On the Monday 8th July event, we have also teamed up with DigVentures who will be running an interactive 'Miracles to Medicine' game to uncover what mysterious maladies ancient people experienced using archaeologist's techniques, and to teach children about the links between Roman and modern medicines.

An archaeologist will also be on hand to demonstrate an easy way to make digital 3D models of historic monuments and ancient artefacts, using only a camera and a computer. Visitors of all ages are welcome and we hope to see you there!
